DIVERSIFICATION

It's sensible for each participant to hold a well-diversified retirement portfolio. Doing so reduces each investor's exposure to risk while optimizing his/her potential for return. The information that follows provides some insight as to how your participants are diversifying their investments.

Investment diversification

As of 04/19/2024

Voya views a person as diversified if their investment mix is made up of at least one fixed fund, one U.S. fund, and one Non U.S. fund and less than 20% in company stock, as applicable. Alternately they are considered diversified if they are invested in an asset allocation fund.

Diversification of participant assets by number of participants

As of 03/31/2024

Average number of investment options utilized per participant

	Mar 2021	Mar 2022	Mar 2023	Mar 2024
With Asset Allocation Funds	4.6	4.6	4.6	4.5
Without Asset Allocation Funds	5.4	5.4	5.4	5.3

Benchmark*

The average number of investment options utilized per participant without asset allocation funds excludes those participants who are invested solely in an asset allocation fund.

Please remember, using diversification as part of an investment strategy neither assures nor guarantees better performance and cannot protect against loss in declining markets.

PERFORMANCE UPDATE

WASHOE COUNTY 401A PLAN

Average Annual Total Returns as of: 03/31/2024 (shown in percentages)

Variable annuities and mutual funds offered through a retirement plan are intended as long-term investments designed for retirement purposes. Money distributed from a 403(b) plan, 401(a)/(k) plan, or a 457 plan will be taxed as ordinary income in the year the money is distributed. Early withdrawals from a 403(b) plan and a 401(a)/(k) plan, if taken prior to age 59 1/2, will be subject to the IRS 10% premature distribution penalty tax, unless an exception applies. This IRS premature distribution penalty tax does not apply to 457 plans. Account values fluctuate with market conditions, and when surrendered the principal may be worth more or less than the original amount invested.

The performance data quoted represents past performance. Past performance does not guarantee future results. For month-end performance which may be lower or higher than the performance data shown please call 800-584-6001. Investment return and principal value of an investment will fluctuate so that, when sold, an investment may be worth more or less than the original cost.

Voya will assess an annual asset-based service fee of 0.03% to all investment options including balances held in your plans Stability of Principal or Fixed Account. This fee is deducted from your account at a frequency determined by your plan monthly or quarterly and will be pro-rated across balances held in each of the investment options. These returns do not reflect any plan level administrative fees, if applicable; if reflected, returns would be less favorable. Please contact your local representative for more information.

The returns assume reinvestment of all dividends (ordinary income and capital gains) and are net of management fees and other fund operating expenses.

You should consider the investment objectives, risks and charges, and expenses of the funds carefully before investing. The prospectus contains this and other information. Anyone who wishes to obtain a free copy of the fund prospectuses may call their Voya representative or the number above. Please read the prospectus carefully before investing.

Returns less than one year are not annualized. Fund Inception Date is the date of inception for the underlying fund, and is the date used in calculating the periodic returns. This date may also precede the portfolio's inclusion in the product.

The risks of investing in small company stocks may include relatively low trading volumes, a greater degree of change in earnings and greater short-term volatility.

Foreign investing involves special risks such as currency fluctuation and public disclosure, as well as economic and political risks.

Some of the Funds invest in securities guaranteed by the U.S. Government as to the timely payment of principal and interest; however, shares of the Funds are not insured nor guaranteed.

High yielding fixed-income securities generally are subject to greater market fluctuations and risks of loss of income and principal than are investments in lower yielding fixed-income securities.

Sector funds may involve greater-than average risk and are often more volatile than funds holding a diversified portfolio of stocks in many industries. Examples include: banking, biotechnology, chemicals, energy, environmental services, natural resources, precious metals, technology, telecommunications, and utilities.

*The Gross Expense Ratios shown do not reflect temporary fee or expense waivers that may be in effect for a fund. The Net Expense Ratios reflect any applicable temporary fee or expense waivers. The performance of a fund with a temporary fee or expense waiver would have been lower if the gross fund fees/expenses listed had been reflected.

Tactical indicators

Economic growth (slowing)

Despite better-than-expected growth this year, we anticipate a delayed slowdown as the impact of tightening money supplies is felt both domestically and abroad.

Fundamentals (neutral)

We believe that earnings have hit a low point and are poised for a significant upswing in the coming quarters. However, consensus earnings expectations may be overly optimistic, given the challenges of growth and contracting margins in a decelerating pricing environment.

Valuations (negative)

Forward U.S. equity earnings multiples are above their historical average and more expensive than in other regions. However, earnings multiples have decreased from their 2021 highs and appear to be at reasonable levels (Exhibit 1). The surge in real yields has made U.S. and global bonds more attractively priced. We see potential for both carry and capital appreciation in high-quality fixed income.

Sentiment (neutral)

The favorable positioning tailwinds we experienced in the first half of the year are behind us, which may result in volatile trading for the remainder of 2023. The selloff since August has alleviated the extreme overbought readings we observed in July.

Quick take

U.S. avoids slowdown (for now)

- Not only has the U.S. avoided a widely anticipated recession (amid historically aggressive increases in interest rates), but the economy has been running above potential growth. However, as higher rates have more time to seep into the system, we think growth comes down meaningfully—but without a sustained contraction in output.
- Inflation remains in focus, and we think it will continue to decelerate despite higher energy prices.
- The labor market is cooling but not breaking. It typically takes 18–24 months after the beginning of a Fed tightening cycle for joblessness to increase. We just moved into this range.
- The U.S. dollar should hold strong given favorable interest rate differentials and recent geopolitical shocks, due to its safe haven status in times of heightened stress and uncertainty.

U.S. equities over Europe, too soon for small caps

- We continue to prefer U.S. assets and have shifted to a modestly more defensive posture overall.
- We remain underweight Europe because of slowing macroeconomic momentum, exemplified by declining services and manufacturing PMIs, which we expect will lead to a markdown in corporate profits.
- China continues to disappoint. Although other emerging market (EM) countries have better near-term prospects, it's difficult to be bullish on EM equities overall when China is dragging.
- Small caps tend to outperform during periods of expanding manufacturing activity, but until we gain confidence that manufacturing has bottomed, we remain neutral.

Bonds are back

- The current environment is favorable for bonds, as the Fed's commitment to reducing growth to below trend should drive yields lower.
- We believe bonds will help diversify stock allocations as we return to a more normal rate and inflation environment.

Exhibit 1. U.S. earnings multiples are at reasonable levels

Portfolio positioning

We think the earnings recession is over and profits are set to improve. However, overly optimistic expectations and a deteriorating growth outlook have us holding a defensive posture within equities and shifting more of our portfolios into bonds after the sharp rise in rates.

Equities	Weighting
U.S. large cap	○ ○ ○ ●	Larger U.S. firms are better positioned to withstand prolonged inflationary pressures and have more durable earnings streams than companies of other sizes or regions.
U.S. small cap	○ ● ○ ○	Small caps continue to trade at a sizable discount to large caps but probably will lag in a risk-off period given their exposure to regional banks, which are vulnerable to further weakness.
International	● ○ ○ ○	Cyclically sensitive Europe faces stiffer inflation headwinds and tighter policy that may hamper earnings ahead. Japan's corporate governance reforms are encouraging for investors, but the country is at a difficult monetary policy crossroads, with the yen weakening to lows last seen in the early '90s.
Emerging markets	● ○ ○ ○	China's reopening has faltered, real estate looks shaky, and the contraction in global manufacturing could result in more downside for China and EM broadly.
REITs	● ○ ○ ○	REITs are battered and beaten. The near-term outlook for commercial real estate is still unfavorable, but prices now reflect dramatically weaker fundamentals.
Commodities	● ○ ○ ○	Precious metals may provide some diversification, but the basket approach could struggle during a global slowdown or recession.
Fixed income	Weighting
U.S. core	○ ○ ○ ●	Investment grade fixed income offers attractive carry with reasonable risk and provides a degree of protection against recession. We think growth declines below trend and pulls longer-dated yields lower. Duration should again provide a hedge to equity and credit risk.
Inflation (TIPS)	○ ● ○ ○	High real yields provide good value as, the Fed looks to be about done hiking rates.
Non-investment grade	○ ● ○ ○	High yield spreads offer reasonable value for income, but potential for capital appreciation appears limited. We are seeing a default cycle emerge following tighter lending standards but overall expect carry to win the day.
International	● ○ ○ ○	Low relative yields and stiff inflation headwinds from Europe keep us favoring U.S. fixed income.

Underweight ○ Neutral ● Overweight ●

Investment outlook

Not only has the U.S. avoided a widely anticipated recession amid a historically aggressive increase in interest rates, but the economy has been defying all expectations for growth. The economy proved to be less interest rate sensitive and more resilient than expected, and consumers and corporations locked in rates near historic lows. As a result, there’s been limited diffusion through the lending channel, which is how monetary policy influences economic activity. We think this is set to change as higher rates seep into the system. There have also been non-monetary offsets that are likely to fade, most notably supportive government spending. The Inflation Reduction Act’s open-ended 25% tax credit on semiconductor manufacturing sparked a boom in construction that is unlikely to be repeated or maintained (Exhibit 2).

Exhibit 2. Recent construction boom isn’t likely to last—construction: mfg. computers, electronics, electrical

All eyes remain on inflation. Core personal consumption expenditure (a key Federal Reserve gauge of consumer prices) was up 3.9% year-over-year in August, continuing its deceleration from last year’s 5.6% cycle high (Exhibit 3). Most of the drop has come from the supply side, but we believe tighter monetary policy and lessening fiscal support will weigh on the demand side in the period ahead. Housing costs are high, with home affordability now below 2006 lows. But rent prices have dropped, which means there will be less inflation. Oil prices have climbed, mainly from Saudi/Russian strategies to curtail supply, pushing headline inflation up. The igniting of the Israel-Hamas conflict has the potential for significant further Middle East supply disruption. Nonetheless, the rise isn’t yet alarming, as it hasn’t translated into higher gas prices (given a big compression in refining margins) and is manageable relative to disposable income growth, which has been strong. Employment data is a more important factor for determining the course of inflation.

The labor market is cooling but not breaking. With the unemployment rate at 3.8%, labor markets have been strong, but job openings and quits have been trending down since March, suggesting a softening in the employment picture. While wages are declining, they are growing above inflation and are historically high. This suggests only a modest weakening in consumer buying power, but we think there is more to come (Exhibit 4). Recent labor union activities have garnered attention, but they represent only about 10% of the workforce.<sup>1</sup> It typically takes 18–24 months after the beginning of a Fed tightening cycle for joblessness to increase. We just moved into this range.

U.S. assets remain attractive. Despite some headwinds, the U.S. continues to offer a robust macroeconomic picture compared to other developed nations, particularly Europe. While we maintain a neutral stance on equities, we believe U.S. large cap stocks are best positioned to grind higher due to their more durable earnings streams than companies of other sizes or regions. We think earnings for S&P 500 companies have troughed and are set to enter a new phase of growth (Exhibit 5). However, earnings estimates are aggressive given what we believe will be slower economic growth in the next few quarters and margins that we believe will revert somewhat alongside tighter financial conditions. This keeps us neutral overall, with a more defensive tilt.

Exhibit 5. Earnings have troughed, but future growth estimates look too aggressive

Small caps are cheap but vulnerable. Small cap companies have a higher proportion of debt that needs to be rolled over in the short term, as well as weaker interest coverage ratios compared to those of their large cap peers. Accordingly, this leaves small caps more exposed to rising rates. Small cap revenues have historically had nearly 2x the beta to nominal GDP of large cap revenues, so any slowing in growth will likely impact this cohort more. However, the beta to service sectors—where most of the future incremental slowdown is likely to occur—appears lower than that to GDP (Exhibit 6). Small caps tend to outperform during periods of expanding manufacturing activity (Exhibit 7); until we gain confidence that manufacturing has bottomed, we remain neutral.

We're cautious on Europe. European stocks ended last year and started this year with a bang, but we think they got ahead of themselves, as they are further behind the curve in their inflation fight. They also continue to contend with issues of the Eurozone structure. For example, having one monetary policy for the Eurozone and different fiscal policies at the country level is problematic (exemplified by Italy and France recently announcing generous new spending bills while the ECB struggles to withdraw stimulus). Europe's slowing macro momentum—illustrated by contracting services and manufacturing PMIs (Exhibit 8)—should take a bite out of corporate profits.

Exhibit 8. Contracting European manufacturing likely to weigh on corporate profits

As of 9/30/2023. Source: Bloomberg.

China continues to disappoint. There was little (if any) reopening burst of activity, and economic growth is slowing, with retail sales, industrial production and fixed investment all coming in lower than expected. Exports have plunged (Exhibit 9), due in part to U.S. companies' efforts to re-shore or move offshored manufacturing elsewhere. Furthermore, China's real estate sector, their main growth engine, is in freefall (Exhibit 10), with multiple large property developers teetering on the edge of default. However, the country continues to make progress on the technological front (for example, semiconductor chips, electric vehicles, aerospace, etc.). While valuations are at deep discounts

(and the government has signaled it may intervene with a stabilization fund to buy stocks), the outlook for Chinese equities remains uncertain. Although other EM countries have better near-term prospects, it's difficult to be bullish on EM equities overall when China is lagging.

Exhibit 10. China's real estate sector is in freefall

The U.S. dollar should hold strong but be less of a headwind to emerging markets. Technicals suggest the modest retreat could continue in the near term, but the U.S. dollar (USD) will likely maintain an edge over a broad basket of currencies due to relative growth and real rate differentials (Exhibit 11). Recent geopolitical shocks and subsequent flights to the USD validate its safe haven status in times of heightened stress and uncertainty.

Bonds look increasingly attractive. The rapid rise in bond yields and the Fed's commitment to reducing growth to below trend should drive yields lower as the economy weakens. Real 10-year yields are approaching 2.5%, and investment grade corporate bonds yield more than the earnings yield on large U.S. stocks. Amid these market conditions, fixed income investments have become more appealing. Furthermore, large corporate issuers are not showing signs of stress, as most treasurers front-loaded financing activities when rates were low.

Diversification is not dead. Through the third quarter, stocks and bonds have declined in tandem, reminiscent of 2022, when both asset classes sold off significantly. While this environment is causing some investors to question the merits of a balanced portfolio, we believe bonds will help diversify stock allocations as we return to a more normal rate and inflation environment (Exhibit 12).

Stay Balanced in an Uneven Macro Environment

Executive summary

Valuations and optimism about rate cuts could limit upside potential for equities

- While we are encouraged by the progress of inflation and the resilience of consumers and corporations, we believe that noticeably slower economic growth, fair to modestly extended valuations, and optimistic forecasts regarding Fed rate cuts could limit the upside potential for stocks.

GP portfolios shift to base allocations

- With U.S. corporate earnings moving from negative to positive, we shifted our Global Perspectives portfolios back to base positioning in early January.

U.S. outperformance can persist

- We think U.S. equities will continue to outperform other countries and regions, driven by the strength of the U.S. consumer and superior corporate earnings growth from unrivaled innovation.

Fourth quarter 2023 review

U.S. equity markets ended the quarter on a high note, bolstered by economic resilience, waning inflation and a pause in the U.S. Federal Reserve's interest rate hiking cycle. The S&P 500 Index rose by 11.69%, and the Nasdaq Composite Index advanced by 13.56%. Information technology stocks led while utilities lagged. Growth stocks outperformed value stocks during the quarter, and small caps beat large caps.

The U.S. bond market staged a comeback during the quarter. The Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Bond Index gained 6.82% on the unexpected strength of the economy. The 10-year U.S. Treasury yield moved from 4.69% at the beginning of the quarter to 3.88% by quarter-end as inflation eased and expectations for interest rate cuts in 2024 grew.

Outlook: Stay balanced in an uneven macro environment

After the unexpectedly strong performance of the U.S. economy and capital markets last year, investors are entering 2024 with a more upbeat outlook. While we are encouraged by the progress of inflation and the resilience of consumers and corporations, we believe that noticeably slower economic growth, fair to modestly extended valuations, and optimistic forecasts regarding Fed rate cuts (Exhibit 1) could limit the upside potential for stocks. Rates are providing little room for yields to decline, unless there is a significant slowdown in economic growth. Despite high expectations, we believe that global stocks and bonds can still generate respectable returns throughout the year. The current environment presents opportunities for allocators to benefit from divergences in global policy, business cycles, and the pricing of risk. In this macro environment, we emphasize balance in our multi-asset portfolios, while also recognizing that U.S. exceptionalism is likely to persist.

The disinflation process continues

Since peaking at 5.6% in February 2022, core personal consumption expenditures (PCE) inflation has trended sharply lower, dropping to 3.2% year over year in November (Exhibit 2). Supply chain issues have eased considerably. Slowing demand-side forces have accounted for most of the recent relief, and we see more downside from factors such as shelter, where market rents suggest a clear trajectory towards 2.0–3.0% in 2024. Core services ex-housing remains a concern for the Fed. Transportation services, such as auto insurance and repair costs, are a source of heat but could decline if vehicle and auto parts prices start to fall. Additionally, weaker wage growth and consumer spending are expected as the lagged impact of tighter monetary policy further filters into the labor market, where there are early signs of softening—such as declining job openings and hours worked (Exhibit 3).

Labor markets cooling

Despite our slow growth outlook and belief that unemployment will rise modestly from its current 3.7%, we don't expect significant deterioration in the labor market. Limited private sector overreach and rising real incomes from falling inflation should keep the growth slowdown mild. Furthermore, the U.S. faces structurally lower labor force participation given its aging population (Exhibit 4), which supports labor demand. Also, after the pandemic highlighted talent shortages, companies may be marginally less inclined to fire. In this soft-landing scenario, U.S. fundamentals should hold up relatively well.

GP portfolios shift to base allocations as corporate earnings turn positive

S&P 500 third-quarter earnings grew by 7.2% year over year, with 10 of the 11 sectors showing increases. Energy was the sector that did not grow earnings, as it was up against tough comparisons from 2022, when crude oil reached prices exceeded $120 per barrel. The consumer discretionary sector led, with earnings rising by more than 13.5% compared with this time last year. In aggregate, earnings came in better than expected, with 82% of companies beating estimates. With U.S. corporate earnings moving from negative to positive, we shifted our Global Perspectives portfolios back to base positioning in early January (Exhibit 5).

U.S. outperformance can persist

Looking ahead, estimates suggest year-over-year U.S. corporate earnings growth will be positive in 2024, accelerating in the back half of the year (Exhibit 6). We think U.S. equities will continue to outperform other countries and regions, driven by the strength of the U.S. consumer and superior corporate earnings growth from unrivaled innovation. The U.S. profit recession front-ran the U.S. economic recession that never happened. Proactive corporate right-sizing left earnings in a position to accelerate quickly off the trough and should support earnings growth ahead. Current estimates are for S&P 500 earnings growth of about 10% in 2024. We acknowledge that the risk to earnings appears skewed to the downside due to rising financing costs and dampened demand; however, in our view, a high-single-digit return is achievable. Returns would be roughly the same should valuations remain unchanged, which seems realistic given they are only moderately expensive versus history (Exhibit 7) and given our belief in the continuance of a U.S. equity premium (arising from numerous advantages and a lack of compelling alternatives.)
